

I strongly support having XM radio provide localized information regarding weather and traffic. It's simply a safety issue. Getting real time information like this is critical and, and is in fact already available on the internet. New technology generally does negatively impact a minority that have economic interests in leaving things the way they are...but as a society we almost always move to the superior service paradigm - if not immediately, then eventually.

Let's cut to the chase this time and do the right thing.

Dave Fasoli